» In continuing efforts to restore services, the Downtown Library opened on Sundays beginning in January, and the branches added a day, each open three days a week as of February.

» The Albany Library installed a permanent 211 phone and created a special seating area for customers to utilize anytime the branch is open.

» On January 13th, the Library participated in curbside distribution of Covid-19 test kits. Several thousand kits were distributed at Albany, Camp Field and Downtown. Residents expressed appreciation for accessing the kits, especially during the Covid-19 uptick in January.

» During February and March, Griffin Health provided 123 Covid-19 vaccinations. In February, vaccination clinics were held on Thursdays alternating between Albany and Camp Field, and weekly on Saturdays at the Downtown Library. The clinics are scheduled to continue at least through the end of May.

» In February, the Dwight Library held its annual “Warm Hands” event, a community focused program that provides warm gloves, socks, mask, and coats. This event served over 80 people. During the months of February and March, Albany staff distributed 50 coats to adults that were provided by CRT in partnership with the Ocean State Job Lot Foundation. Community members expressed appreciation for these brand new, warm coats.

» The Commission on Human Rights (CHRO) for the City of Hartford visited the Park Street Library. Ana Maria Mitchell, Human Rights Trainee, gave an overview on all services provided by CHRO in hopes that the community becomes more aware of the free services offered.
Youth and Family Services Department turned one of the study rooms on the second floor into a Family Resource room. The impetus behind the idea was to create a place for children, teens, and families who may need a private space to meet such as DCF families on supervised visits and also for parents who may need access to a computer or other appointments while their young children are with them.

VITA tax services, provided by The Village, returned in a limited capacity to the Downtown Library. Despite only seeing clients two days a week, volunteers managed to file 704 tax returns, the fourth most out of all 12 VITA sites this year.

SUPPORTIVE COMMUNITY FOR CHILD AND ADULT LEARNING

Thanks to a $100,000 grant from the CT State Library, HPL launched the Digital Inclusion for Older Adults Program. This program aims to improve the digital literacy of Hartford residents 55 and older. The Library provides training, helps people get affordable home internet, and provides devices to those who need it. Since the program started in January, HPL has worked with over 50 residents. Here is a comment one of the Digital Navigators, Elijah, received from a customer: You TRULY helped me.

• “You showed me how to create a ZOOM account, and you made it fun. You also helped me with filling out the fillable form to make sure I knew what I was doing if I would need to get into it myself. It was great that you noticed that my mouse was in the disabled mode therefore making it easier to work on my laptop. You taught me some different computer terminologies such as ‘web browsers’ and the difference between Internet Explorer and Microsoft Edge, which I had been confused about since I purchased my computer last year. You gave me GREAT CONFIDENCE, thereby allowing me not to be afraid to play with some of the websites and apps on my computer.”

The Youth & Family Services Department hosted two virtual Social Justice sessions titled Social Justice: My Family Rocks with CREC schools in January. First graders listened to Shelley Rotner’s book Families and shared ways that their families are alike and different. In the second program, participants created a Quilt of Belonging. A total of 168 first graders and their teachers were in attendance.

» This quarter youth librarians were able to resume more in-person programming off-site at various daycares, preschools, and schools across the city. In total, there were 44 programs for 886 participants. New Youth Services Librarian Trainee at Barbour partnered with the LOW to provide programming for Milner school’s aftercare program. They engaged with about 60 kids, doing a mix of art, STEM, and reading/writing. They are also there to help support the students with books on body positivity, grief, and mindfulness, as well as any other books they request.

TEEN SERVICES

» Thanks to a partnership with Foodshare, YOUmedia is able to provide small food pantry with snacks for teens across the system and food items they can take home.

» YOUmedia mentor Michael Martin ran programs on flying drones in YOUmedia and at Albany. YOUmedia Manager Marc brought his game design and stop motion animation programming to two schools and began working with teens at Albany on Virtual Reality. He introduced them to character creation and game design and is currently working with them to create the concept and characters of their own unique video game.

» Mentor Eli ran numerous in-person audio production workshops for studio sessions, where students come to record their own tracks and learn studio etiquette, as well as how to record vocals. Some stand out teens include Nate Myles and artist BMC Blazed, whom Eli helped to complete their independent singles to be released on their social media platforms.

» The Boundless Enrichment program enjoyed the first K-pop event in YOUmedia. Everybody who was present had a good time creating their K-pop photocards, making bracelets, learning K-Pop dance moves, watching the Korean film Train to Busan, and trying out the Asian snacks.
The Public Programming Department offered a total of 46 in-person programs with a total attendance of 854 attendees, 21 live virtual programs with 627 attendees and 6,992 views, and 1 recorded program with 260 views.

BABY GRAND JAZZ 2022

» The 19th season of Baby Grand Jazz eased back to an in-person crowd after 1.5 years of virtual performances. The season started with an audience capacity of 25 attendees and increased to 100 attendees by April. Every performance was live streamed to HPL’s Facebook page and YouTube channel.

» Matt Chasen, board member of Hartford Jazz Society, served as an excellent host of the series and was able to share his extensive knowledge of each featured musician with the audience. The series featured Hartford favorites, pianist Emery Austin Smith, as well as welcomed new bands from across the Northeast such as the soul/R&B/jazz group “Sounds of A&R” from New York City.

» Some of the many positive comments in the livestream chats and in person:

- “Loved it! Excellent performances! HPL is the best!”
- “I’m always feeling blue when this great Sunday series ends. Nothing like the Baby Grand Jazz at a Place Like No Other, HPL!!!! Well done!! Thank you all!!!”

- “The music and performers were each outstanding in their own way. I liked the smaller crowd and the intimacy of the room.”

ARTLINK

» Through the second iteration of the program series ArtLINK, Hartford Public Library was able to continue to offer mental and social health support to customers of all ages during a vulnerable time in the community. HPL worked in conjunction with Hartford Behavioral Health, a local non-profit with a dedicated trauma informed clinical team who employ evidence based therapeutic treatment modalities to cultivate healing, happiness and goal attainment. A Hartford Behavioral Health art therapist was paired with local artist instructors to offer multiple series of workshops around making pottery, podcasting, and visual arts.

» Danessa Pedroso, Hartford ceramic artist of Warm Jungle Studios, led the pottery workshop series to an enthusiastic group of participants. The group produced several dozen glazed and fired ceramic pieces that they got to take home. The podcasting workshop series was led by the hosts of “How’d I Get Here,” a Hartford based podcast. Podcast participants worked with their own podcasting kit (microphone, recording device, and headphones), which have been barcoded so that they can take them home to continue their own podcasts. Each workshop series offered 6 weeks of weekly sessions. The participants in both the pottery and podcasting workshops were enthusiastic about participating in future workshops. HPL is awaiting news about funding for a third round of ArtLINK this coming fall.

» New to this iteration of ArtLINK was the addition of “Just Art” open studio sessions. Just Art is a drop-in open art studio in the Cafe every Sunday for 8 weeks. Art mentors Lindaluz Carrillo and Deka Henry were at each session to help people use the materials and guide their artmaking. Lindaluz and Deka also hosted their own art workshops on mosaic making and processing hard times through art. The art therapist also dropped in to guide the art making processes. These sessions were meant for adults, but many parents came with their children and made art together.

» All of the artwork created in ArtLINK has been documented and was on display in digitally projected art exhibits at Albany and Park Libraries, coordinated by HPL’s Program, Production & Engagement Coordinator, Nygel White.

MERCADO POPULAR

» HPL partnered with Mercado Popular, a market series that supports local farmers and entrepreneurs and creates an avenue for access to fresher and more healthy foods for Hartford neighborhoods.

» Arrow, a local musician and healer who usually plays live music on main street, continued to offer weekly live meditation music on the main floor every Friday.

» HPL Programming Assistant Enale Zua created “The Rose Petal Project,” a passive arts program on the main floor that encouraged people to express their feelings through prose or poetry on a paper rose petal that would be made into a rose and take selfies under a rose arch. The project engaged people coming to the library to share their feelings and words of encouragement, especially after a long isolation period caused by the pandemic.

» HPL staff member Martha-Rea Nelson created and hosted the Spring Equinox Yoga on the ArtWalk in honor of the 2022 Women’s History Month with the theme “Providing Healing, Promoting Hope.”

» Residents were invited to join free, virtual workshops to learn about the City of Hartford’s I Heart my Home program, which is a customized, no-cost energy coaching service that helps residents navigate a variety of resources related to home improvements for health, comfort, and energy savings. Participants were expected to leave the workshop with a better understanding of their utility bill support, fuel assistance, and more.

The LOW team built up capacity to start circulating more of the LOW collection at our partner sites, which had been on hold at the request of our partners. The LOW team has been circulating more books especially at our senior center sites—South End Senior Center, North End Senior Center and Immanuel House.

HARTFORD HISTORY CENTER

HIGHLIGHTS

THE ART OF PERSEVERANCE

» The 3rd Q highlight was, by far, the unveiling of Marilyn Parkinson Thrall’s sculpture, “The Art of Perseverance”. The unveiling ceremony of this sculpture that is dedicated to the women of Hartford who fought for equal suffrage and who registered to vote in October 1920, was a joyous occasion! It was wonderful to welcome friends and colleagues back into the HHC for a social and celebratory event. It was the first time people had gathered in the HHC since early 2020. The unveiling ceremony also allowed HHC staff to physically display a portion of the previously online only exhibit, “October 1920”. The exhibit and the sculpture highlight Hartford women’s voter registration cards. The voter registration cards are a real HHC collection treasure! The sculpture and the exhibit were well received on the evening of the unveiling and continue to draw people to the Hartford History Center.

INCREASED ENGAGEMENT WITH THE ARTS AND HUMANITIES THROUGH ACCESS AND EXPOSURE

» This quarter we mounted two well attended ArtWalk exhibitions that impacted different audiences. From January 7 through February 20, we hosted Hartford raised, Brooklyn based artist, Michelle Thomas’ exhibition, The Adornment Series: Images of Empowerment featuring mixed media works representing imagined ancestors of the African diaspora. Alongside the exhibition, we hosted a mask making workshop on February 12, our exhibition closing on February 18, and multiple children’s and teen group visits and reflective workshops, including with a group of 5th graders from the Grace Academy School for Girls on February 17. Over 800 visitors came to see this exhibition.

» On March 11, we opened our next ArtWalk with CT-based artists James Finnegan and Michelle Cotugno’s exhibition, “Words on Clay, Words on Paper” featuring over 70 fine printed poetry broadsides and a collection of clay works with hand printed poetry. On March 26, we hosted an artist talk and letter press printers panel, featuring a selection of CT-based printers and poets who discussed their processes and stories of project development. Over 400 visitors came to see the exhibition within the month of March.
Alongside our ArtWalk exhibitions for the quarter, we featured Hartford-raised, Manchester-based artist Sonyetta Strickland in our glass cases outside of the Hartford History Center and Hartford-raised artist Linaluz Carrillo on the 3rd floor administrative wall. Strickland’s work in clay sculpture and mask making, printmaking, and paintings spanned three decades of work and shared celebratory images of sisterhood, womanhood, brotherhood, and families of the African diaspora. On March 19, we hosted a meet the artist event for her, where members of her family also connected with maps and city directories in the Hartford History Center, tracing their connections to Hartford to the 1950s. Carrillo’s 40” x 60” colorful and bold prints brought life back to our 3rd floor hall and was the first exhibit installed in this space since the start of the pandemic. The images were part of the “Embrace” series, which she created in the early phase of the pandemic to have audiences reflect on their experiences of isolation and their desires to feel connected to loved ones lost and loved ones still alive through this moment.

On February 3, the Hartford History Center represented our Hartford Hip Hop Collection in a presentation with Trinity College Prof. Seth Markle at the virtual Global Conference on Hip Hop Education with over 60 educators, archivists, and artists tuning in from around the world. On March 16, we did a similar presentation with an in-person Trinity College American Studies graduate class called Curating Community Conversations in Public Humanities.

For Black History Month, a selection of Black changemakers from the Draw a Hartford History Maker exhibition were on display at Camp Field and Park libraries. Biographies of those pictured were translated into Spanish for the displays.
» On March 10, the HHC partnered with the Ancient Burying Ground Association to present a virtual program called “Researching Hartford’s Early Black and Native Communities” with Dr. Kathy Hermes. Over 70 people attended this presentation from across the state of Connecticut.

» On March 22, we kicked off our spring virtual partner “Encounters” series focusing on the Declaration of Independence. The three-part dialogue series around “American Identity and Connecticut’s Civic Reconstruction” was funded by Connecticut Humanities through the “A More Perfect Union” granting program of the National Endowment for the Humanities. Its aim is to foster meaningful and informed discussion around the values that form the basis of our nation and to encourage everyone to learn more about our shared history and participate in our democracy. The initial program attracted about 35 participants.

» On March 30, the Hartford History Center was invited to discuss our Hartford Changemakers summer program for a virtual program series called “We Make History: Culturally Relevant and Intergenerational History Education,” which was put together by Wesleyan University’s Jewett Center for Community Partnerships. We discussed our Hartford Changemakers online reference resource and our mural project celebrating the history of Black firefighters in the city of Hartford with special guests, HPL Board member Steve Harris and artist facilitator, Lindaluz Carrillo. We were honored to be in conversation with New Haven teacher Nataliya Braginksy and two of her former high school students who discussed their New Haven history mapping and virtual tour project, which also focused on Black historical assets.

STRONGER RELATIONSHIPS AMONG COMMUNITY ORGANIZATIONS

» Hartford Public Library was contacted by the Connecticut Historical Society to be a partner in their multi-city NEH-funded Community History Project to make more diverse their preservation of resident experiences during the COVID-19 pandemic. HPL participated in partner meetings January and March and will be supporting CHS in sharing the opportunity for interested community members to participate in this oral history program through our branch system.
The HHC has partnered with UCONN’s Pandemic Journaling Project to plan a major exhibition downtown for the fall. Every month this quarter, the teams have met to discuss curation, mounting, and programming development to involve public services, programming, and the children’s department to share personal stories, images, alongside selections of the Hartford History Center’s own Hartford 2020 documentary photography collection on the COVID-19 pandemic.

DEEPER UNDERSTANDING OF SELF AND CONNECTION TO COMMUNITY BY LEARNING HARTFORD HISTORY

- During the 3rd Quarter, HHC assisted 88 researchers and welcomed over 104 visitors. Additionally, HHC answered a significant number of reference questions by phone and email. Since the beginning of the pandemic, HHC has become adept at assisting researchers remotely, granting virtual access to HPL’s special collections.

- The HHC exhibited collection materials to honor Martin Luther King Day and Black History Month featuring photographs from the Hartford Times Photograph Collection as well as books written by Black Hartford authors and poets. Also exhibited were selections of winter scene photographs and postcards.

- In February 2024, Hartford Public Library will mark the 250th anniversary of the founding of the Hartford Library Company. This private subscription library would eventually become the Hartford Public Library. The Hartford History Center has formed a committee (HPL’s 250th) to begin planning how best to mark this important milestone in the history of the library. Twelve Board and staff members, representing almost all departments, replied to the initial call to join the Committee. The Committee will convene at the beginning of the 4th Quarter.

- As part of a Hartford Public Library cross-departmental effort, the Hartford History Center prepared a list of online resources for the Capitol Region Education Council’s January Racial Justice Week for teachers of 6-12 graders.

PRESERVING HARTFORD’S HISTORY FOR FUTURE GENERATIONS

- During the 3rd quarter, the History Center gave permission for one of the Hartford Times photos to be used in an exhibit in Austria.

- Renewed interest in the Hiram Percy Maxim film collection coincided with a grant opportunity, and we have applied for funding to restore and digitize Hiram Percy Maxim’s films. A long time Hartford resident and inventor, Maxim’s accomplishments include designing an electric carriage for Pope, creating the Maxim silencer, founding the American Radio Relay League, and being a key player in the formation of Brainard Airport.

OTHER:

» Participated in Connecticut Humanities meetings regarding oral histories initiative

» Participated in CTDA metadata migration review working group meetings

» Participated in Connecticut Humanities’ statewide digital initiative meetings

» Participated in the DLL manager search process

» Created documents to aid in training DLL staff, provided together with explanatory information to DLL consultant Michael Ulsaker.
» Communications’ biggest highlight of Q3 was the launch/kickoff of the new North End library at the Swift Factory. A press conference/open house organized in collaboration with Community Solutions on March 8th was well-attended by local media, library supporters and neighborhood leaders. A subsequent press event was held with Congressman John Larson to highlight a federal grant the project has received resulting in another round of positive coverage. Plans are underway to create a standalone website to provide updates and information about the project, similar to the new Park Library.

» Throughout the quarter, Communications continued to work with the City to share information about COVID-19 test kit and mask distributions at Library locations across Hartford. This included preparation of flyers, graphics, press releases and social media posts and working with local media to spread awareness about the initiative.

» Communications developed and executed a robust marketing plan around the Library’s annual Baby Grand Jazz series including digital and print advertising. Our email subscriber list for jazz grew to nearly 800 recipients with an average open rate exceeding 50%. All shows were sold out.

» Communications worked with IT and Programming to accommodate a request from Mayor Bronin to hold a virtual news conference at the Albany Library in conjunction with the White House to promote the expanded Child Tax Credit. Hartford was one of several cities highlighted for its work to spread awareness about the program, something the Library and City have partnered on for months.

» We are also pleased to report that Mayor Bronin chose to film his State of the City address in March at the new Park Street Library @ the Lyric and featured the project in his speech as “a monument to patience and to perseverance and to partnership.”

» Communications continues to work closely with the Development department on major library fundraising initiatives and events, assisting with mailings, invitations and other communications with donors. This included a reception in late March for Women’s History Month featuring the unveiling of a suffragist sculpture by artist Marilyn Parkinson Thrall that is now part of the Hartford History Center’s permanent collection.

» Communications is working with Programming on a marketing plan surrounding the launch of “The Beat,” a new service that will allow customers to listen to a variety of music by local artists. We are looking forward to beginning the program in June.

» HPL continues to gain followers on Facebook, Twitter and Instagram, with the strongest growth on Instagram. There has been a decline in total engagement on Facebook that is in part attributable to the return of in-person programming at the library and a reduction in the number of prerecorded and live programs conducted virtually. Our overall open rate for marketing emails rose to 27% in the third quarter of the year, up from 20% the previous quarter. We added 400 new contacts over the quarter.

BARBOUR LIBRARY @ SWIFT PROJECT

In January 2022, Hartford Public Library & Community Solutions issued a request for proposals and qualifications from qualified professionals to provide architectural design services for the Barbour Library to be built at the former Swift Factory at 10 Love Lane, in Northeast neighborhood of Hartford, CT.

The firm of Silver, Petrucelli and Associates and Margaret Sullivan studios will work on the final design and build out of the new state-of-the-art library for services. The first-floor plans will include space for robust cultural and humanities programming, civic engagement, technology access, collections, and educational support services for all ages. The second-floor space will become the NextGen Learning Center at Swift, a multi-faceted service center for the Library’s workforce readiness, certificate and training classes, including technology training, small business support, and community learning programs.

ALBANY LIBRARY ANNEX PROJECT

The Albany Library Campus project will be a two-Phase Project. Phase I will consist of the stabilization, remediation and roof replacement which will be managed by the Department of Development Services. Phase II will consist of the build out of the Library and will be managed by Hartford Public Library. The firm of QA+M will be handling the design firm for Phase I of the project. An existing conditions report was completed in March 2022 and the firm is in the process of preparing the Project Manual Specifications and drawings to be prepared and completed in the May time frame.

ROPKINS

Ropkins Library is undergoing a redesign of the library space and will be the future site which houses the Hartford Courant Archives collection. The space is being designed to store and provide access to the collection for research. Additionally, the technology space and collections of the library for customers will also be redesigned providing a new fresh look and improved space utilization. The work will include movable shelving, new carpeting, furniture, and redesign of the technology and public seating spaces.
