Family Friendly Comedian Performs at Hartford Public Library

Hartford, Connecticut (May 7, 2012)- Hartford Public Library's Comedy Showcase welcomes professional comic Linda Belt as she presents an evening of comedy touching on the absurdities of marriage, parenting, and social mores. Linda will be sharing stories and laughs on Tuesday, May 8, 6:30 p.m. at Hartford Public Library's new Center for Contemporary Culture, at its Downtown location. This program is free and open to all ages.

Belt is a New Jersey native who moved to Connecticut in 1987 where she became a suburban pillar of the community, attending PTO meetings and baseball games. She became very weary of holding up that pillar and instead now holds her own as a professional stand-up comic. Belt has performed throughout the US and Canada at clubs and comedy festivals.

The Sun Record states, "Linda's humor is aimed at everyone. Her insights and comedic timing connects and transcends every stereotype imaginable."

Hartford Public Library is offering many programs in its new Center for Contemporary Culture, including movies, speakers, and public forums. To learn more visit <http://center.hplct.org/>.

This program is presented with support from City Steam Brewery Café.
