MK Asante Speaks Oct. 25 As Part of Hip Hop Nation at Hartford Public Library

Oct. 12, 2016 — MK Asante, author of Buck: A Memoir speaks about his early years on Tuesday, Oct. 25, 5:30 to 7:30 pm, in the Center for Contemporary Culture at Hartford Public Library, 500 Main St. The event is part of the Hip Hop Nation programming.

The bestseller recalls Asante's youth in Philadelphia, which he refers to as Killadelphia, Pistolvania. His older brother is arrested, Asante hates school, and his father is absent. But he learns to write, inspired by hip hop artists Tupac Shakur and Public Enemy.

Asante studied at the University of London, earned a B.A. from Lafayette College, and an M.F.A. from the UCLA School of Theater, Film, and Television.

Asante is a Distinguished Professor-in-Residence at the MICA School of Ideas in India, and a tenured professor of creative writing and film at Morgan State University.

He also wrote It's Bigger Than Hip Hop, and two volumes of poetry, Like Water Running Off My Back, and Beautiful. And Ugly Too.

Books will be for sale and light refreshments will be served.
